ABOUT US

The Ann van Dyk Cheetah Centre was established in 1971 as a cheetah breeding project. Through intense dedication and patience, Ann pioneered a successful breeding program, which also included discovering the King cheetah. Various conservation projects have been initiated at the Centre since its inception, including a successful African Wild dog conservation program,

WE AIM TO

- Continue to play a role in conservation and preservation of Cheetahs and Wild dogs.
- Support scientific investigations & research in all aspects of these endangered species.
- Promote public awareness by giving visitors the opportunity to view these endangered species.
- Maintain a genetic pool by means of a scientifically based breeding program.
- Generate income to support existing and future breeding projects at the Centre
- Re-establish endangered wildlife species into areas where they once occurred naturally.

Fifty years later the Centre still continues, with dedication, to assist in the conservation of these endangered species. The Centre works very closely with nature conservation as well as several other conservation organizations as they embark on an exciting project of re-wilding and releasing captive born cheetah into a protected natural habitat

FUNDING

The Ann van Dyk Cheetah Centre is a non-profit organization and relies solely on income from tours, donations, sponsorship and the adoption program in order to subsidize veterinary accounts and to ensure the wellbeing of our animals.
